

Agonizing pain.
A stillborn baby.
Chronic incontinence.
A lot for a twelve year old to deal with.

It's likely that you've never heard of Obstetric Fistula. Neither have millions of women in the developing world who suffer from this tragic childbirth injury.

They don't know why they had to endure up to seven days of obstructed labour. Or why their baby was born dead.

They don't know that the ceaseless pushing left a hole between their bladder or rectum and their vagina, and that this is why urine and faeces constantly leak out of them.

They don't know if they will ever be welcomed back into their homes, or if they will live out the rest of their lives as "she who is no longer woman."

Saddest of all, most don't even know that a simple, inexpensive operation could mend their bodies and give them back their lives.

But now you do. The Campaign to End Fistula is how you can help.

We help to provide the operations that repair Obstetric Fistula, as well as the emergency caesarean sections that can prevent it from even happening in the first place.
